Robert Mann Gallery
210 11th Avenue
New York, NY 10156

Having supported and watched the Waterpod evolve from concept to fully realized dream from the very beginning, Robert Mann Gallery is pleased to congratulate Mary Mattingly and all of those involved with the Waterpod. As the project in this form comes to a close, we can safely attest to what an inspiring work of art and project this has become. Mary's photographs very often include self-constructed sculptures and speculative inventions dealing with the realities of living and sustaining in the harsh landscapes of the post-apocalyptic future. Clearly the Waterpod anticipates that future. But while Mary's recent exhibition "Nomadographies" embodied such futurity, The Waterpod fully engages our present time and the active communities of New York's waterfront harbor. It has been fascinating to see how Mary's materially diverse practices still exist within a cohesive continuum.

We look forward to welcoming all to the gallery to see the evolution of Mary's work in the future!
